

The City's SOCIAL LIFE

Events, Gayeties and Personal Activities of the Week

She Answered No.

She answered no—yet why dispute?
Twas on the day of Cupid's fair,
When lovers' ties to win or lose,
To make their entrance or egress
In spirits light and debonair.

Yet, though I boasted not to care,
I knew I was more than life could bear
If through fair love's uncertain maze
She answered no.

In truth, I loved beyond compare,
And all my soul was in my prayer:
"Oh, dear, dear love, that I would choose,
If I should ask, wouldst thou refuse?"
In accents soft, with blushes rare.

She answered, "No."
—Clifford Howard, in the Puritan.

Worked Both Ways.

St. Paul Trade Journal.

The correspondence was brief, but to the point. The letter she received was as follows:

"Dear Madam—I take pleasure in shipping to your address a rug valued at $50, for which I shall be glad to receive your check. If you do not desire the rug, please return it."

"The idea!" she exclaimed. "I never knew such impudence!"

She sat down and wrote the following:

"Dear Sir—I have ordered no rug from your establishment, and I see no reason why I should go to the expense of returning that which I do not want, and which was sent to me unasked."

To this she received the following answer in due time:

"Dear Madam—I will send for the unsolicited rug, and I trust you will do me the favor to send for the unsolicited charity entertainment tickets now in my desk."

"The discourteous hour!" she exclaimed. "Evidently," he soliloquized, "there are methods of procedure that cannot be successfully applied to business."

A Riddle Parry.

What to Eat.

A riddle party will make the evening pass pleasantly for a small gathering of friends. The invitations should be sent at least a week before the entertainment, to give time for the preparation of the riddle, original or otherwise, that each guest must bring. These riddles and answers are written on cards and dropped into a basket at the door. Later paper and pencils are distributed to the guests, and the riddles, one after another, are propounded by the hostess. A Japanese puzzle box or a daintily framed photograph of "Who Will Be Answered?" "Puzzled," or some kindred subject may be given for the first prize, and for the bonus a rhymed couplet, esp. which, however, is but the cover of a bon-bon box and carries consolation with defeat.

THINK SO?

The Minister's Wife Was Right.

When a baby's life can be saved by food it is worth while knowing something of that food.

A minister's wife, name given below, writes: "I do not exaggerate in the least when I say that I have never yet seen a picture of the starving babies of India that looked as bad as our baby did. The skin was drawn as tightly as possible over her little frame, and she was almost dead. Her little form was so shrunken that it was pitiable to look at. Her bright eyes only showed that she was alive."

"She was starving to death, for everything she ate was immediately thrown off from her stomach. We tried every kind of food we could think of, and only kept her alive by purging with oil and cod liver oil into the rectum."

"The doctor was doing all he could, but finally we sent for an uncle, an old physician, to come and see her. The doctor agreed perfectly, but uncle advised us to use Grape-Nuts Food."

"We immediately got some and placed a spoonful in some boiling water. This was allowed to simmer until the food became perfectly soft. A little rich milk was added, and just enough sugar to sweeten. It made a delicious food, and it was astonishing how perfectly it agreed with our baby and how she liked it down."

"She would drink milk unless it had Grape-Nuts Food in it thereafter."

"After a few days she began to show marks of improvement, then she improved very rapidly. When we began feeding her Grape-Nuts she weighed about ten pounds, now she weighs over thirty, and is almost as plump as she is long."

"Our friends all think it a miracle that she recovered. While I am writing this letter one of my older girls has just come up begging for some Grape-Nuts and cream."

"We naturally believe in Grape-Nuts for it has saved the life of our baby." Mrs. W. H. Hardin, Spring Hill, Tenn.

The other guests were Mrs. Charles H. Hall, Mrs. Samuel J. Faber, Mr. Frank Gates, Mrs. D. W. Derby, Mrs. S. T. Nichols and Mrs. Fugate. The rooms were fragrant with cherry blossoms and in the center of the daintily appointed table was a large crystal bowl of red carnations.

The Ladies' Society of the German House gave a pleasant May entertainment yesterday afternoon in the form of a hearts party. The hostesses were Mrs. C. B. Pier and Mrs. Julius Karmann, and they were assisted in receiving and entertaining by Mrs. A. A. Randall, Mrs. D. E. Gillingham, Mrs. E. O'Reilly, Mrs. Frank Edenharter, Mrs. William Carlin, Miss Lillie Hansen and Miss Alice Mueller. The table with the white cloths was placed in the center of the room and adorned with spring flowers.

A double wedding occurred at St. Mary's Church Tuesday morning. One of the brides was Miss Theresa Stich and the bridegroom was Mr. Joseph Stich, the other bride was Miss Josephine Marmon and the bridegroom was Mr. Joseph Stich. Rev. Father Schiedler presided over the marriage ceremony before a large audience of friends and relatives of both couples. The brides wore white gowns and carried bouquets of white roses. They were attended by Miss Marie Stich, who wore a white gown also, and Mr. J. C. Hurie was the best man. Mr. and Mrs. Stich and Mr. and Mrs. Stich have gone on a wedding trip and will return home in June.

WISHARD-COWAN.

The marriage of Mrs. Mary D. Cowan and Dr. Frederick G. Wishard took place yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Doolittle, No. 2125 College avenue.

The Island of Monte Cristo.

Now Used as a Quiet Retreat by the King and Queen of Italy.

Marquise De Fontenay, in Washington Post.

Although the submarine cable connecting the mainland of Italy with the island of Monte Cristo is now completed it is doubtful whether King Victor Emmanuel will visit this favorite retreat of his until after the birth of the heir to the throne a few weeks hence. Otherwise the small but pretty villa, surrounded by its picturesque grounds, has not been so long enlarged, as when the King and Queen stay there they will dispense, as heretofore, with the presence of gentlemen and ladies in waiting and live the life of private people of bourgeois rank.

The history of this island, rendered so famous by the most popular of all the novels of Alexander Dumas, is an interesting one which would be well worth reading the book will like to hear. From the eighth to the sixteenth century it was inhabited by monks, by the ruins of whose monastery, perched on the lofty peak of the highlands, are still to be seen, as are likewise the ruins of the fort on the seashore, which they built in the twelfth century to defend themselves against the attacks of the Saracens. The island, however, invaded the island in force in the sixteenth century, sacked the monastery and carried off the monks. For the next two hundred years the island remained absolutely uninhabited, and was not until the middle of the eighteenth century that the Grand Duke of Tuscany established a penal colony there with a small garrison of soldiers to keep watch over the convicts.

This was in turn abandoned after a time, and again the island was left to the ravages of a very violent and eccentric Englishman of the name of Taylor took a fancy to the place while visiting the Mediterranean, and, visiting Florence, induced the Grand Duke of Tuscany to sell the island to him. He built the villa, which still exists, surrounded it with pretty grounds and park, and lived there in solitude for a number of years, his island monarchy, made vain efforts to colonize it, ultimately selling it to the well-known Florentine Marquis Ginori, who used it as a game preserve.

While in garrison at Florence King Victor Emmanuel, then only crown prince, was, on several occasions, the guest of the island, and took such a fancy to the place that he eventually purchased it from him. It was thither that he took his bride for the honeymoon after their marriage, and the place has been specially dear to them ever since. The total population of the island does not exceed fourteen persons, all in the employ of the King. The villa, built by Taylor in the early part of the last century, is furnished in the most simple fashion. It has not more than twelve rooms all told, and when the royal couple are staying there they divide their time between strolling the game, with which the island is literally abound, and in crabbing barefooted among the rocks and along the shore, or else the young Queen sits on the steps leading into the villa and chats with the peasants, who are allowed to work on such state papers as brook no delay. No one who has not had some experience of court life, of its utter lack of pomp, of its simplicity, of its ceremony and etiquette, can appreciate at its just measure the pleasure which the young King and Queen of Italy find in their retirement to live the life of ordinary every-day people of the middle classes.

Interesting Madame Wu.

Atlantic City Letter.

While Madame Wu was here she saw the sights from a chair, as she cannot walk in American style. Some of the ladies in the notice attempted to draw her out on the subject of courtship and marriage in China, but she proved to be as diplomatic with silence as her distinguished husband is with words, and, in the language of one of the listeners, "they did not make anything of her."

To one young lady from Baltimore she said that marriages in China are arranged by the fathers. The lady responded that that was also the case in the United States. Madame Wu's son, who is decidedly Americanized, interrupted, "It's just the other way here; the fathers have nothing to do with it." And later, when his mother hesitated at the line of questions, he exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, do say something!"
